Reshaping the Educational Framework

Health Break

10:15am - 10:30am

Session 1: Fostering the Creation of an Agile Learning Space by Enabling Technology Integration in Health Programs

10:30am - 11:30am | Christy Taberner, Faculty & Simulation Coordinator, Mohawk College & Timothy Chan, OT Reg., Digital Learning Technician, Mohawk College

Introducing the Rapid Response Team. The remote/virtual landscape has resulted in an urgent need for digital learning content creation. Providing support that enables creativity and an understanding of virtual platforms offers faculty the opportunity to enhance their academic deliveries while assessing needs, consulting on options for digital learning and quickly supporting the rapid creation of content. Working in close collaboration with faculty/faculty teams, the goal is to identify, recommend and create content using digital learning technologies.

Facilitated by Barbara Elliott, Dean, School of Health Sciences, College of the North Atlantic

Session 2: Empowering Students Through Flexible Learning Pathways

11:30am - 12:30pm | Jennifer Figner, Interim Vice President Academic, BCIT

To keep pace with the growing demand for personalized learning pathways, health educators are challenged to design programs that address the explicit needs of our workforce in a dynamic and flexible format, fueling a transformative shift in education. By providing multiple entry points and progression routes between institutions, courses, or educational levels, we can accelerate the path to employment while improving recruitment and retention.

Facilitated by Lisa Chu, Dean, School of Health Sciences, British Columbia Institute of Technology

Lunch Break: Networking & Group Tours of NAIT Simulation Centre

12:30pm - 1:45pm

Session 3: Fostering Global Perspectives

1:45pm - 2:45pm | Julie Desrochers, Director of Global Education & Partnerships, NAIT & Leslie Weigl, Intercultural Specialist, NAIT

In response to the changing socio-economic landscape, internationalization has become increasingly valuable particularly within the context of health education where patient outcomes are deeply influenced by cultural competence. By embedding global perspectives in policy development and program design, we can enrich the campus experience and provide enhanced supports for international students.

Facilitated by Maxwell Jones, Dean of Science, Medical Studies and Engineering, Dawson College

Session 4: Expanding the Scope of Inter-Professional Education

8:30am - 9:30am | Lisa George, Chair Laboratory & X-Ray Technology & Interprofessional Healthcare Education Lead, NAIT

During the height of COVID-19, the emergence of task-shifting became increasingly popular to optimize the use of existing healthcare staff. To further support this practice and foster collaborative team environments, health educators must overcome a number of institutional barriers and develop long-term strategies to meaningfully and sustainably integrate IPE experiences into programs of studies.

Facilitated by Michael Dumoulin, Director, La Cité

Session 5: Responding to the Call: Leveraging Partnerships to Expedite Innovation in the Delivery of Health Programs

9:30am - 10:30am | Nicole Barron, Associate Dean Centre for Professional Advancement, Mohawk College

The existing health human resource crisis facing our Country is not new, but has been exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic. This presentation showcases an example of how post-secondary institutions can re-imagine traditional program approval, development and delivery processes to enable agile and responsive training solutions in the healthcare sector. Enabled by the Centre for Professional Advancement, Mohawk College will share best practice examples of working with partners to stand up just in time accelerated programs to meet immediate workforce skills gaps. The innovative models combined the strengths of the academic institution, the employer and the regulating authority to build and deliver a solutions-based approach to meet a community need.

Facilitated by Christa MacLean, Dean, School of Nursing, School of Health Sciences, Saskatchewan Polytechnic

Health Break

10:30am - 10:45am

Session 6: Diversifying Revenue Streams

10:45am - 11:45am | Kerri Oshust, Director, Centre for Advanced Medical Simulation, NAIT

In recent years, financial sustainability has become the single largest threat faced by universities and colleges alike. To address this growing challenge and support economic recovery, post-secondary institutions must critically examine the opportunities to leverage resources and identify new revenue streams. This talk offers a perspective on the administration of a Simulation Centre as an external revenue generator. The Centre for Advanced Medical Simulation at NAIT has a focus on aligning its vision and mission with its revenue diversification goals, in order to achieve a successful and sustainable business model. Offering high-quality, value-adding simulation services and programs that meet the needs of the target audience and generate positive outcomes.

Facilitated by Denise MacIver, Dean School of Health and Life Sciences, Northern Alberta Institute of Technology
